BEWARE OF VIRUS ALERT POP-UP SCAMS

Fraudsters often prey upon fear and time-sensitivity to lure victims into providing personal information. A common scam that has been on the rise during the past few years revolves around Tech Support for fake issues.

Here's how it works:

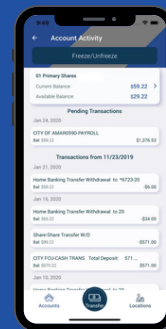

While browsing online, you may suddenly see a pop-up window warning that your computer may be infected. They'll provide a Tech Support phone number urging you to call immediately to resolve the issue.

When you call, they'll offer to remote in to your computer to fix the problem, for a fee. Not only can they charge you a bogus fee and obtain your card/bank information; but if you give them access to your computer they could also install malware that can continue to steal data from you. Remember: your computer's security system may ask you to update software or run a scan, it wouldn't request login information or that you call to speak to someone.
